The points of the compass mark the divisions on a compass, which is primarily divided into the four cardinal directions: north, south, east, and west. These points are further subdivided by the addition of the four intercardinal (or ordinal) directions – northeast (NE), southeast (SE), southwest (SW), and northwest (NW) – to indicate the eight principal winds.

The "straightedge" and "compass" of straightedge and compass constructions are idealizations of rulers and compasses in the real world: The straightedge is infinitely long, but it has no markings on it and has only one straight edge, unlike ordinary rulers. It can only be used to draw a line segment between two points or to extend an existing segment.

The compass bearing is the direction towards which you are headed, as shown by a compass.. The four cardinal points on a compass, which split the circumference of the compass into four equal parts, are (going clockwise) North, East, South and West. Since there are  $360^\circ$  in the circumference, the cardinal points are separated by  $360^\circ/4$  or  $90^\circ$ .
