othello study questions learning pdf

Othello's final speech puts us in mind of his long speech in Act I, scene iii, so that we see him, even if only for a moment, as we saw him then. This process of conflating two different times and views of Othello is similar to the rhetorical effect achieved by Othello's dying words, where he makes his suicide seem a noble and heroic deed by conflating it with the killing of a Turk in service of the state.
